Category:Utilities for WindowsQ: Is it possible to access a JavaScript code in an iframe from the parent page? Is it possible to access a JavaScript code in an iframe from the parent page? I am aware of eval, but since it is an attack I want to avoid that. I think it is not possible with innerHTML because that only changes the HTML. A: No, It is not possible. If you were to access the JavaScript code in the iframe, you would be able to access your own code. You could also add a listener to the document of the main page so you can access it's own code. A segment of the Genome of the Neurological Diseases that are Caused by Different Mutant Gene Mutations. A segment of the genome of different neurological diseases that are caused by various gene mutations was compared. The results showed that 14 segments were common and that they were located in 5 chromosomes (1, 2, 6, 9 and 10). Of the 14 segments, 2 segments were characterized as the "barrier" (abundant in the normal person) and 12 segments were characterized as the "barrier-reservoir" (abundant in patients with neurological diseases). It was suggested that these segments were associated with the mutation of neurological diseases.

Q: Backbone+Marionette binding EventHandler I am currently trying to implement a.render() on a view. I want the.render() method to check for a state on the server side, and if the server side returns a certain status, it will call the `renderView()` method on the view. The issue I am having is that if I use the `view.bind()` function, it works well, but it fires on the server side everytime a model on the server changes, which I do not want. I want the `.bind()` method

Geo Photo Stamper is a very easy-to-use program that will stamp every photo with date and location. No more having to find a spot to take your picture by yourself, it will get the coordinates for you. Software makes it easy to keep track of your vacations or trips. Take a trip down memory lane and see where you've been in the past. You don't have to add any information manually, Geo Photo Stamper will do the job for you. It is very easy to use. Just select your pictures folder and click on "Start". All pictures going to be stamped automatically. Original picture quality is not broken on stamped picture. Stamped picture is not being smaller. Notes: Most of the positive reviews are simply because it is an easy to use app. It can be a little bit "messy" as in the title implies, but that's just because the different images are on top of each other, if you look into the preview window, you can see the different stamps. Q: Set specific CSS style on specific ID I have a simple login form that when clicked open a new screen on the same page. I have styled the page as such

What's New In?

Geo Photo Stamper will insert the date when a photo was taken as well as its GPS coordinates on your digital photos. The application automatically reads all informations from picture files and adds them to bottom line of the pictures.

When you take a picture from your cell phone that navigation capability have, it saves GPS information. Geo Photo Stamper software reads this information and prints on your picture. It's very easy to use, just select your picture folder and click on "Start". All pictures in your folders going to be stamped automatically. Software is not printing information on pictures, instead, it adds a bottom line to picture. So all information can be read on all pictures. Original picture quality is not broken on stamped picture. Stamped picture is not being smaller. Mbube shivers at the thought of a police officer moving through his neighborhood. A community policing exercise run by the police beat officers at Grootvlei involves the community. Police have been trying to break the cycle of crime since an anti-apartheid march in 1955 was marred by the stabbing of a policeman, and the community response was to arm itself. The message is that the police are here to help, but police have been accused of moving in slow motion while crimes are being committed at an increasing rate. One witness, Gabby Mbube, says he doesn't even recognise his neighbourhood anymore. The word "apartheid" is tossed around at some point in most people's conversations, but

Mr Mbube was not raised on it and neither was his neighbour, Peter. “I don’t know what it is,” says Mr Mbube. “We can’t see the differences between our races. The whites say there’s a problem in our community, but we don’t know what that problem is.” Peter has lived in the same community for 30 years and he too has noticed a change in the community, but it is not the change he had expected. “We have a neighbour who is a butcher,” he says. “And another who is a postman. He is a Mpumalanga Indian and has been here for 30 years.” Mr Mbube says the ANC wants to fix everything, but now they are threatening the results of their actions. “You can see it in our community,” says Mr Mbube. “The ANC is calling for elections and they are saying the government needs to protect our communities. But I don’t want to be protected. “We are not helpless; we need to protect our neighbourhood.” Allan, a taxi driver from the city, agrees with the police that there is a lot of work to be done in the area. He even sympathises with the ANC’s frustration. “I live
